

What Theaters Offer This Week

BELASCO.

A triumph of characterization such as is rarely seen is offered at the Belasco Theater this week, where Lionel Barrymore is adding more fame to his name in Augustus Thorne's play of the civil war, "The Copperhead."

As the Illinois farmer-patriot, who, through love for his country, suffers himself to be so misunderstood that he loses friends and family—lost everything worth possessing in life, Mr. Barrymore plays a part which, for forcefulness of conception and delineation, has no equal upon the stage today.

A cast of superb capabilities supports the star, all portraying characters of civil war days with a fidelity and artistry that holds audiences spellbound throughout an unusually virile play.

The story: Milt Shanks, farmer neighbor of Abraham Lincoln, is disclosed as a rabid Copperhead, the name applied to those northerners who openly favored the South, and oftentimes helped the Confederacy in its struggles during the 60's. He sees his son march off in the blue of the Union army. He loses the friendship and respect of his neighbors and all who know of his rise to a position of prominence. He comes back from prison, pardoned after his conviction of murder in having participated in the killing of officials while engaged in a guerrilla raid—comes back to learn of his son's death at the siege of Vicksburg. Hated by his wife, who denounces him as an unclean, Shanks finds everything lost to him.

Then the spectator is carried over forty years to the early 1900's. Shanks, an old gray-haired man, distressed by all because of the hatred which has survived the years, lives with his granddaughter. He has practically no friends. But when his daughter's aspirations to the post of village teacher are threatened by what occurred in 1861, and the following bloody years, Milt Shanks tells the truth.

In a scene which leaves the reviewer floundering about for words to fittingly describe the magnificent artistry of his performance, Shanks tells how he was in reality a northern spy, especially commissioned by his friend, Abraham Lincoln—tells how he could not tell friends—not even his own family—of his real work—tells how he suffered, all for his country's sake.

Of course, the revelation clears him, and he is as much a hero as he was once looked down upon. All ends happily, and the final curtain closes one of the finest plays that has visited Washington many seasons.

Mr. Barrymore is ably supported by Doris Rankin, whose portrayal of his wife, and later his granddaughter, was of a type seen too rarely on the American stage. John J. Pearson, Albert Phillips, Eugene Woodward and Edwin Holland, as well as Raymond Hackett, add characters which are well played, and come well up to the standard set by the star. The other members of the cast are capable, and will assist in making "The Copperhead" will score as great a success with Capital audiences as it did in New York.

NATIONAL.
Pretty girls, catchy tunes, amusing situations, and an interesting thread of plot combine to make "Gloriana," at the National this week, a most enjoyable evening's entertainment. "Gloriana" is a musical comedy in three acts, the book and lyrics by Catherine Chisholm Cushing and the music by Rudolf Friml.

Toward the end of the first act the germination of the simple plot begins to brighten the stage; and the second and third acts prove as delightfully interesting and funny as one could reasonably wish.

The story can be told briefly. Gloriana Grey, eager to help her companion, Dolores Pennington, obtain a small fortune to which the latter presumably was entitled in view of the supposed death of her husband at the front, poses as the Pennington widow and calls at the Pennington household to arrange for the settlement of the estate. The Penningtons have never seen Dolores, having opposed her marriage to Jonathan Pennington, and the deception was easily perpetrated. But Gloriana's knowledge of the Penningtons was limited, and countless delightfully amusing situations arising from this ignorance were inevitable. Gloriana falls in love with Jonathan's brother, and they are about to wed when Gloriana begins to fear that Dick will jilt her when he learns that she has deceived him by her identity. But word suddenly is received that Jonathan has not been killed, but merely taken prisoner, and all clouds on the horizon of love are dispelled. The charm of the play comes from the clever lines, although the dialogue in places sparkles.

The musical numbers are pretty, and the show is a house full of them. "I Love But You," "I Love You, Dear," "Frocks and Frits," and "Have My Fingers Crossed" are perhaps the songs that make the greatest hit. The chorus is unusually pretty, but the audience was most pleased by the "Dance of the Porters," Gilbert Wells and C. Balfour Lloyd, who were repeatedly encoored.

Eleanor Palmer was charming in the title role, cleverly playing the part of the suppliant widow, now feigning sorrow for her lost husband, and now forgetting the ruse and inquiring as to the identity of a picture of her adopted husband. Joseph Lertora, playing Lieut. Dick Pennington, was an ardent lover. His good looks, his clear voice, and his skillful acting made him an attractive figure. Dorothy South, as Dolores Pennington, was all that one might wish. Alexander Clark, as Alexander Galloway, was well cast as a woman hater, a man who swore he would never marry any woman unless she was championed by a certified check.

POLLY.
"Information, Please," the vehicle which Jane Cowl is riding to a dual success this season, is by far the cleverest comedy that Washingtonians have had an opportunity to see in many months.

The audience at Polly's Theater last night witnessed a double success. The comedy, which is making the world a safe place for a smile, was written by Miss Cowl in collaboration with Miss Jane Murfin.

It is in three acts. The story is one which is to all stages what the "Sub-Deb" stories were to contemporary literature. Miss Cowl was written a part for herself which fits exactly.

The scene is laid in London, in the rooms of Lady Betty Desmond, wife of Sir John Desmond, a member of the British parliament and as Irish as is Ormeau. Lady Betty, who is the fortunate young man playing opposite Miss Cowl, Lady Betty finds that Sir John is giving at least half his time to politics. She is the neglected wife. Lady Betty, being beautiful and witty and nice and clever, and all those things, enters into an unhappy and disastrous flirtation with a very young man, who is the son of a fashionable hotel in New York, having crossed overseas during the intermission. Also, the second act finds Sir John in the hotel, and other members of the cast, which includes a secretary and a maid to Lady Betty, Sir George Forrester, brother of the very young man, and another English gentleman in search of a wife the suspects of eloping with Lady Betty. Don't get excited—it all came out right—without bloodshed and with but few tears. And Lady Betty cried at the fashion of the evening called "adorable." The piece ends in a happy reunion in the rooms of Lady Betty, with the very young man engaged to the secretary.

"Information, Please," an excellent entertainment, one of the most laughable and well-played comedies ever brought to Washington.

B. F. Keith's.
Two fixed stars of vaudeville, Blanche Ring and Joe Jackson, divide top-line honors at B. F. Keith's this week. Miss Ring comes back with several new songs of war flavor. Her opening number is an all-star for the lack of the usual Ring melody. The vivacious comedienne used the audience to good advantage in the chorus numbers.

Joe Jackson has long been a prime favorite with vaudeville patrons. Though he has the same pomposity that gained him stardom in past seasons, he still continues to score heavily as a mirth purveyor. His act is always a generator of merriment. Herbert Clifton went under the wire as a winner in his travesty on women. His impersonations are of the superior type and his wardrobe earns favorable comment from the women spectators.

Offering his ever bewildering series of surprises in legendarily, Ashl and his troupe were favorably received.

The Wilton Sisters, dainty dancers and singers, were a distinct hit. Olga and Mishka Company gave an excellent exhibition of grace and style in a dance novelty, Frances Nordstrom and William Pinkham have a domestic comedy along familiar lines which found an appreciative audience.

Another old favorite remodeled for this season is "Crosby's Corners," a rural playlet interpolated with vocal and instrumental numbers. The Hearst-Pathe News pictorial of current events completed the program.

GAYETY.
Two of Broadway's best known stars, Al Reynolds and Florence Mills, are at the Gayety this week with Max Spiegel's "Merry Rounders."

They are presenting light revue in two acts and six scenes, entitled "The Smugglers." It abounds in brisk comedy situations and tinsel music.

Abe Reynolds, whose Hebrew characterizations have put him in the front rank of burlesque comedians, has a role in the new production that fits him nicely. Florence Mills is a stately blonde and possesses a dazzling wardrobe. Her scene with Reynolds in which they simulate intoxication was one of the bright bits of the performance. Eva Suede and Mildred Tyson are two lively southeasters who are provided with most of the song numbers of the show, which they sang with delightful abandon.

Others in the company include George Kinneas and C. Elwood Faber. John Quigg and his accordion provided a specialty that was repeatedly encoored. The chorus is the most attractive lot of girls seen at the Gayety this season, while the costumes and scenic effects are elaborate.

COSMOS.
An enjoyable bill is being presented at the Cosmos Theater this week, two acts of which are of unusual excellence—Albert Cardo and Rae Noel, formerly of the Bostonians and of the Aborn Opera Company, in beautiful song selections, and Helen Kitchener and "The Golden Bird," a young violinist, and her wonderfully trained canary.

Bartello Brothers open with athletic posing and weight lifting, followed by Harry Lang, with new songs and jokes, and Raymond Wiley and company in a song novelty.

Marva Rehn, assisted by Bertie Pugh at the piano, puts over some lively patriotic songs to big applause, and Jenks and Allen are a scream in a rube skit.

The extraordinary matinee attraction pictures Nazimova in "Toys of Fate," a tragic romance of gypsy life. Other film attractions include a series of educational films and a cartoon war comedy, with the Hearst-Pathe News.

LYCEUM.
A lively burlesque production, "The Auto Girls," won the approval of the Lyceum patrons at two performances yesterday.

The show is designed to get as much music and laughter into a single evening as the authors could arrange.

Carol Sherwood, a Washington girl, divides the song numbers with Anita Mae, Vanetti, the accordionist, and Mlle. De Pins, an acrobatic artist, are the other feminine players who head the snappy chorus. Billy Wild, James J. Lake, and Rose Hill look after the comedy and perform their task decidedly well.

CRITERION.
"Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," the feature photoplay at the Criterion Theater, featuring Tom Mix, portrays a screen dare-devil, shows the inner workings of the Secret Service against the activities of the great German spy plot to cripple the great war industries of the United States.

It tells of the work of two German agents, ostensibly affiliated with a renegade organization who try to cause a strike in a great tungsten mine which the Government is depending upon as a source for material for its guns.

The photoplay abounds in patriotic thrills and a real love story that engages one's sympathies for the man who is unable to justify himself in the eyes of his sweetheart until the unexpected finale.

FLAMES DESTROY AWNING.
An awning in front of the home of J. F. Robinson, 700 Fourteenth street northwest, was destroyed early this morning by a fire of undetermined origin. Firemen from No. 1 Engine Company extinguished the blaze.

WRITERS SEE PARIS PLANT.
PARIS, Sept. 17.—A party of Central and South American journalists who are visiting France made an inspection yesterday of a munition factory constructed in Paris during the war which employs 12,000 persons and produces daily between 40,000 and 50,000 shells. To date the factory has produced a total of 20,000,000 shells.

The Condition Facing the Washington Street Railways Is Not Exceptional

IT IS a general war-time condition, directly affecting the street railway industry throughout the country.

Within the past few months relief has been sought and granted in 246 cities scattered all the way from Maine to California, covering 36 of our 48 States, until today more than one-quarter of the urban population of the United States are paying more than a five-cent fare.

THE RELIEF granted has been in various forms, all the way from a ten-cent fare in three cities to a straight five-cent fare, abolishing all tickets and special reduced rates to workmen.

We believe that the people of Washington are as fair-minded as the people of any of the 36 States which have already taken favorable action.

BASING our action upon the faith we have in Washington people, and anticipating favorable action upon our petition, we have, in the interest of better car service for the thousands of Washington war workers, assumed obligations in the way of additional equipment and higher salaries to our employees, which must be met by increased revenues.

The following is a list of cities where action has already been taken, giving the rate of fare under which they are now operating:
